ALMA MATER

EAST BRADY HIGH SCHOOL

Brady High, our Alma Mater;
Now thy praise we sing.
Brady high, with fondest mem'ries
Clear our voices ring.
We will ever proudly claim you,
As a friend who's tried and true
Brady High, our Alma Mater;
Hail! All hail to thee.

For the friendships we have formed here
We remember thee
For the knowledge we have gained here
We give thanks to thee
With your task of ever serving
And your purpose never swerving
Brady High, our Alma Mater;
Hail! All hail to thee.

DEDICATION

In appreciation of the advice, aid, and guidance given us while serving as our class advisor, we the graduating class of 1952, wish to express our sincere gratitude by dedicating THE VOYAGER to Mr. William R. Zeitler. Mr. Zeitler is a graduate of Clarion State Teachers College.

THE IDYLLS OF '52

In taking one glance backward over our years
We see most readily events that made
Impressions deep and long to be remembered.
Experiences less glowing but necessary to our pattern
Are merely to be buried in time and ne'er recalled.
Our journeys from grade to grade must have been similar
To those who have gone before.
But to us the sentiments seemed deeper
And the struggles seemed more bitter to bear.

Twelve years ago on a bright September morn,
We precious little dears who were one day
To be known as upperclassmen of Brady Area High
Were ushered by fond mothers to our houses of knowledge respective
Each of us entered the portals through which we were daily to pass.
Quartered though we were in places far and wide,
Problems of the three R's our common concern seemed to be-
Scratching our heads to know
Which block and where it should go.
Proud moments were there when we entertained
The upper classes with our rhythm band.
Oh, how we clanged, banged, and tooted those triangles, cymbals, and horns!
Nor was our time devoted entirely to lessons and skills
But also to learning to play at games like London Bridge.
Our footing on the first rung of the ladder
Having grown secure and firm, our next attempt
Was to leave the first and reach toward the next.

The second step for those of us who lived in town
Presents a picture somewhat like the first.
It is a panoramic view
Of redbird and bluebird classes in reading
Complicated equations ($9\frac{7}{7}$) and long words incomprehensible (woman.)
Games were exciting and gay--"Pussy Want a Corner" and "Farmer in the Dell."
Fond memories others of us have
Of our days in schools that are outlying.
Though facilities were lacking, we grew
And learned of the golden rule.

Ready for another rung on our way to the goal,
Still very crude were we but eager.
Through the summer there had been added to our school rooms dear
The blessing of the electric light with its glow and cheer.
Happy were we to find on that first day
That the boys and girls from Phillipston had come to stay.
To learn more expressions that are properly said,
Dear teacher presented to us each our first text of the King's English rule.
It was during this year that many of our members performed
In their first operetta, The Frog Prince.

Off we were to that fourth step on the way,
With more of the same plus geography.
There was presented near the end of the term
The operetta, Midsummer Night's Dream,
In which appeared several of our classmates from town.
It was in March of this term that fire
Destroyed the building of our classmates from Furnace.
Necessity it was that caused them to form
New friendships and adjustments in a different environment at Pine Run.

Our fifth year we thought quite exciting.
To dance in music class was such a thrill.
Abilities and bents artistic were displayed
When several 'mates depicted the familiar street scene,
Portraying children at play and picturesque panorama of life.
For the first time we were given special instructions,
To learn the states and capitals of our country dear,
After much study,
We were given a map without labels
On which we were to supply the correct names
Of the states and their capitals without erring.
Our mastery of this project so worthy
Gave teacher a feeling of happy fulfillment
Of the task she had set for us to complete.

Our sixth step we greeted with even more eagerness.
All the girls thought it such a privilege
To wash boards for the teachers dear.
The boys did their part by cleaning erasers and sweeping the floor.
We were all rather happy to know
That next year would be a turning point--
The introduction to junior high.
We all realized that we must set out to prepare
For the grand and glorious days of high school.

Well on our way were we in East Brady toward becoming,
Full-fledged students in junior high,
With Mrs. Songer as our advisor and guide.
Keen-edged was the novelty of extra school activities.
Into our midst to help us enjoy this new life
Happy were we to welcome the lasses and lads
From the township of Sugar Creek's fair countryside.
With the girls to cheer us on,
We Bradys Bend Township boys excelled at our game
On our new and spacious basketball court.
To urge our East Brady boys on with the ball,
We selected junior-varsity cheerleaders who could top them all.
In East Brady magazine subscriptions sold we
To finance a tour of interesting spots in the Steel City.

As we continued our efforts toward reaching
The twelfth and final step to our goal,
We now were determined to master step number eight in due turn.
With Miss Wiant as our well-known and helpful guide,
We were set for a year of activities of value and interest to all.

We swung our partners in the square dances
And bought our ladies' boxes at the auction.
Proud were we in having winners two
One each for the American Legion Auxiliary Award and one for the American Legion Award.
Of value inestimable were our maps of East Brady's site.
To appreciate and understand the significance
Of this our own locale,
We made a tour of our Clarion County village and countryside.
Right smart thought we to have eligible
Three-fourths of our number for recognition as penmen superb.
As guests at a class luncheon we were happy to have
Mr. Wimer, penmanship supervisor, and Miss Kopera, instructor of the culinary art.
To students in the far-flung district schools,
This year was considered as a time for graduation from grammar school-
Upon examination, of course.
At a program planned especially,
Certificates were awarded the worthy.

Our ninth grade and high school at last,
Expansion the order of the day was to be.
It was two teachers, two rooms for our headquarters now.
High school was so different from the school of yesteryears.
Or did it just seem that way now
That we had launched on the chapters that were to close our career.

Our tenth step little excitement involved.
One exception to thus statement is in order at this time.
For us there was a prize at the Mardi Gras,
That ranked but second after the best,
This recognition was won for our show of art
In depicting a hill-billy wedding right smart.

Our eleventh stepping stone.
Was the most exciting of all our school years.
Lucky were we to have Mr. Zeitler as our advisor again.
We had just gotten settled for a term of work and fun
When try-outs for the junior class play began.
For Wedding Spells success was really in store.
Through the months we worked diligently toward
The outstanding event of the year---
The Junior-Senior Prom of '51
Northern colonial was the theme for decorations
For the beautiful colonial ball.
Splendor of the thrones and majesty in the atmosphere
Set our moods in tune with the glory and honor to be bestowed
Upon the senior boy and girl of our choice
Who were to reign as king and queen of the prom.
Varied was the selection of honors to be won by our group.
Seven of our members were to be enrolled in the Honor Society.
To one was presented the International Bookkeeping Award.
Goodly representation had we in such groups
As cheerleaders, majorettes, newspaper staff,
And players of varsity and junior varsity ball.

Our last chapter--chapter twelve,
Concluded our book of school life.
Mr. Rittenbender favored and honored us all
By being our able adviser and guide.
We had the honor of having one of our students,
To be chosen editor of the school newspaper,
The Scholars' Ship.
Likewise we were proud to accept in our midst such places of honor
As editorship on the staff for the yearbook, The Voyager;
Three girls of our number were chosen to lead cheers at the games;
Six boys were chosen to play basketball for our school;
Their loyalty and diligence plus capable coaching by Mr. Guesman
Made us proud of our boys for their showing
Of skill and sportsmanship outstanding.
We wish to express our delight and appreciation
For the honor and fun we enjoyed
At the prom, the athletic banquet, and the banquet sponsored by the school's Alumni.

--Therese May

CLASS PROPHECY

May 30, 1962

Dear Diary,

Last night I attended a reunion banquet for the class of '52 at the Robert Morris Hotel in Philadelphia. The theme for the banquet decorations was originated by Dick King, a very successful interior decorator, who was ably assisted by his efficient secretary, Betty Lou Greenawalt. Jack McGinnis was the toastmaster for the evening. I was very eager to discover the occupations and activities in which my former classmates have been engaged since our last meeting.

Seated next to me was Beulah Corsini. In the course of our conversation, I found that she is now teaching advanced composition at the University of Purdie. On my right was Rebecca Booher and Myrna Bish, who appeared with the latest hair styles. They revealed that they are successfully operating the exclusive Nu Way Beauty Shoppe in New York City. Rose Marie Salak was the next person who drew my attention. Upon inquiry, I found that she is now employed at an airline hostess by the Trans-World Airlines.

Suddenly there was a stir of excitement when a piercing sound penetrated our ears. All eyes were focused on the far end of the table. There sat Elmer Bailey painfully clutching his hands. What a commotion followed! Upon investigation it was found that he had broken a glass and had accidentally cut himself. First aid was expertly administered by Joanne Hooks and Kathryn Long. These two are well qualified nurses since Joanne is health director at St. Francis Hospital and Kathryn is employed as head nurse there. After the excitement subsided, I spoke to Elmer about his present occupation, and he informed me that he is the chief pilot of the executive aircraft owned by Standard Oil Company.

Two tall, well built men tapped me on the shoulder, and I immediately turned to look at them. I was pleased to see Paul Crissman and Henry Dantimo. Paul reported that he is now basketball coach at Westminster College, and Henry proudly announced that he is the star pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates. He is nicknamed "The Blackout."

Next I approached a young man whom I had been watching all evening. Each time I had cast an eye on him I noticed that he was busy observing all the persons and then writing something on a little white pad, which he carried with him. The heretofore observant individual, Gene Dolmovich, looked up at me and gave his usual smile. After conversing with him, I found the cause of all his curiosity. He had been appointed to the position of editor of the PHILADELPHIA TRIBUNAL and was now collecting information concerning our party for his paper. Betty McClaine, who was standing near by, sprightly walked over to me and told me of her undertakings. She has now become the head librarian at the Carnegie Library in Pittsburgh.

Pat Winslow was making his rounds for the evening when he suddenly spotted me. He rushed over and greeted me heartily. We discussed with amusement our old school days and reminisced over the many wonderful happenings there. He modestly proclaimed himself head engineer of the Corbett Construction Company of Pittsburgh. Walking close behind him was Jim Roach. I had always remembered Jim as the slow, inactive person--the possessor of much intelligence. Now his stately erectness and height serve as distinguishing characteristics. When he told me that he is now a lawyer I became intensely interested as I too am practicing law. Then a lively conversation followed and continued for a long time. Law suits were tried; men were convicted and acquitted. Certain cases were discussed.

Finally, our conversation ceased on common personal interests gave way to hearings of the reports of other guests as we move our way among more of our former classmates.

Dale Yount, a representative of the Fuller Brush Co., and his secretaries, Therese May and Marjorie Flick, have just gotten back from Europe, where they have been establishing a market for their products. They gave me a detailed report of their trip. Affiliated with this firm are Helen Yurkovic and Mildred Haye, who are the head bookkeepers at the main office in Chicago. They expressed their joy in being at the reunion and seeing all their old classmates again.

Ray Belinotti, the new owner of the Stairway to Heaven Night Club in Philadelphia, made special announcement that his establishment was now open for business and that he would be very happy to have our presence there anytime we happened to be in this city. We graciously accepted the invitation and promised to comply with these wishes in the future.

Tom McClaine, Vice President of a local finance corporation, spoke to me next and then he introduced me to his charming wife. He made known a bit of interesting information concerning his business.

Betty Jean Van Dyke reported that she had been a stenographer prior to her marriage to Barney Weibel. Mrs. James A. Jeffery, formerly Melda Kemery, told many interesting facts of her nursing career before her marriage.

Appearing very handsome in their uniforms, Art Wolfe, and Guy Shultz strutted over to me. Both had become lieutenant commanders in the United States Navy and had obtained a leave to attend this great event. Vista Stuchell, a member of the Waves, also approached me. She portrayed a lovely picture in her dark blue uniform. No sooner had I left my Navy friends than I ran int two other persons who are engaged in serving our country. These were Tom King and Sam Brown. As members of the Air Force they have both become instructors. Tom has excelled in piloting and Sam in communications.

I spied a small man walking towards me and I hastened to meet him. I discovered that it was Bob Peters. He still retains that sparkling twinkle in his eyes and seems just as jovial as ever. We conversed for a long time and told each other of our vocations. He is now the owner of the Peters Gas and Fuel Company.

Excited but full of satisfaction, I decided to occupy a seat near the end of the table to await the entertainment and to make further observations of my friends. Almost immediately after I had done this, I became surrounded by a group of people talking and jesting loudly. This included Mary Galassi, Darl Cochrane, Henry Vasbinder, Tom Weibel, Chuck Vlassich, Sara Seybert, and Delores Lasher. Our congenial exchange of information continued as each told his present occupation. Mary Galassi is a famous tennis star; Darl Cochrane and Henry Vasbinder have attended a trade school in Ohio and now have become crafted carpenters. I was especially interested in Tom Weibel's discussion since I discovered he is the Industrial Arts teacher at East Brady Area High School. He gave me a full account of the school activities and the new devices which have been introduced. Chuck Vlassich expressed the joy and happiness which he is experiencing in doing his selected work. He has become the chief mechanic at Harper's Garage near Harrisburg. Sara Seybert and Delores Lasher are both married but also following careers as business women. Delores is head clerk in a fashion shop in New York, and Sara has become a secretary for a large business firm.

Jack McGinnis called our attention to the entertainment which was about to begin. We were soon listening to a snappy tune played by Jack Beabout on his electric Hawaiian Guitar. My friend seated near me said that he is the owner of a filling station near this city. Bill Rinehuls, our class comedian and jokester, next appeared to make his debut as an entertainer. His style and manner of presentation amused us thoroughly. Soon he favored us with several piano numbers. Everyone nodded with approval. He has become quite a musician besides being an accountant for the Mellon Savings and Trust Company. A tall, well-dressed person next made an appearance. I was very happy to see that it was Mrs. William Blake, the former Adrienne Jones. The music began and our hearts thumped wildly as we listened to the beautiful and appropriate solo that she sang. Although Adrienne has been a busy housewife for sometime, she still receives many invitations to appear on stage as a vocalist. Her husband, Bill Blake, another former classmate, has become a star roller skater in the great Philadelphia Arena. Edgar Bish, on account of his attendance at an important business conference in New York, was unable to attend the banquet and he was missed by all.

After a loud applause was given for all the wonderful performances, the toastmaster introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Mr. James R. Bittenbender, now professor of Social Science at Penn State. He delivered a brilliant and inspiring address concerning the present day laws, pacts, and agreements, which evade our Constitution and stressed how this violation vitally affects our lives.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bittenbender's speech, each extended a fond farewell to his fellow classmates and began his homeward journey.

Goodnight Diary,

Tom Finn

CLASS WILL

We, the Seniors, leave our knowledge gained in producing yearbooks to the Juniors.

To the Sophomores, we leave our poise, dignity, and acting ability.

To the Freshmen, we leave our high standard of achievement.

To the school, we leave our empty place to be filled by new students.

To the teachers, we leave our sincere and heart felt appreciation for guidance through twelve trying years.

I, Rose Marie Salak, leave my gym suit to Glenn Hornberger.

I, Sara Seybert, leave my driving ability to Shirley Warner.

I, Guy Shultz, leave my "hot rod" Chevie to Ron Seybert for junk.

I, Vista Stuchell, leave my love for skating to Gail Brown.

I, Betty Jean Van Dyke, leave my figure to Wilson Downing.

I, Sam Varasso, leave my love for the drive-in to Gaye Eck.

I, Charles Vlassich, leave my muscles to White Shore.

We, Elmer Bailey and Tom Weibel, leave our slow, calm, and sensible driving to Glenn Wolfe and Dick Harnack.

I, Pat Winslow, leave my love for doing homework to my brother Tom.

I, Art Wolfe, leave my dislike for school to Wayne Wolfe.

I, Dale Yount, leave my curly hair to Lawrence Fresh.

I, Helen Yurkovic, leave my quiet manners to Dawn Painter.

I, Jack Beabout, leave my love for Pat Winslow to Patty Wick.

I, Ray Belinotti, leave my bashfulness towards girls to Ron Custer.

I, Edgar Bish, leave my narrow waist line to Marie Ion.

I, Myrna Bish, leave my mile walk to the bus stop to Carolyn Murphy.

I, Bill Blake, leave my love for pestering girls to Silvo Andreassi.

I, Becky Booher, leave my dimples to Jean Peters.

I, Darl Cochrane, leave my height to John Paul Rinehuls.

I, Sam Brown, leave my ability to get into trouble with Miss Hicks to Ted Earley.

I, Beulah Corsini, leave my love for school to Rusty Weibel.

I, Bill Rinehuls, leave my seat in the Honor Society to John Paul.

I, Paul Crissman, leave my love for girls to Walter Dunmyre.

I, Henry Dantimo, leave my spirit in Queenstown.

I, Gene Dolmovich, leave my activeness to Gleen Wolfe.

I, Tom Finn, leave my happy smile to my sister, Pat.

I, Marjorie Flick, leave my love for shorthand to Betty Wolfe.

I, Mary Galassi, leave my ability in all sports to Donna Hillwig.

I, Betty Lou Greenawalt, leave my love for tumbling to Norita Snyder.

I, Mildred Haye, leave my liking for Blue Row to Shirley Coachman.

I, Joanne Hooks, leave three more years of hard study to Leon McAfoose.

I, Adrienne Jones, leave my silly laugh to anyone who thinks he can imitate it.

I, Melda Kemery, leave my brother Harold to Joanne Preston.

I, Tom King, leave my love for the lower end of town to Fred Patsy.

I, Dick King, leave my curly hair to Bob Murphy.

I, Delores Lasher, leave my ability for talking myself out of jams to Dick Harnack.

I, Kathryn Long, leave my smiling disposition to Mike Hudak.

I, Therese May, leave my height to Don Brothers.

I, Betty McClaine, leave my ability to get along with the Senior Class to Mr. Bennis.

I, Tom McClaine, leave my good behavior in Study Hall to Gene Zanot.

I, Jack McGinnis, leave my driving ability to Jane Jordan.

I, Robert Peters, leave my trouble with Miss Carnesale to Norman Dantimo.

I, James Roach, leave my stubbornness to Mary Theresa Hile.

I, Henry Vasbinder, leave the school I missed for someone else to make up.
